Systems Transformation

A boundary spanner is someone who navigates among the different systems and agencies to achieve common goals.*

SAMHSA's Goals for ATCCs

- Systems Transformation – coordinated system of judicial intervention combined with community-based services that are consumer & recovery-oriented, evidence-based, & quality-driven
- Provide services to individuals with any type of behavioral health problem, including COD, to receive treatment and recovery support services as part of a judicial collaborative
- Expand services to more clients and enhance services to new and existing clients
- Trauma-informed justice system
- Inclusion of peers in the ATCC process

Trauma-Informed Justice System

How Being Trauma-Informed Can Improve Criminal Justice Responses

- 2012-2013 – the GAINS Center trained 365 trauma trainers nationwide, most of whom have delivered training for their communities
- During 2011-2012, the GAINS Center provided direct deliveries of the trauma training to over 500 people nationwide.
- Trauma training developed specifically for Judges & other Court Professionals
- Trauma training developed specifically for Case Managers

How are the ATCCs Doing?

- ✓ Significant improvements in coordination among partners
- ✓ Blending of “cultures” of drug & mental health courts & philosophies
- ✓ Expansion of EBPs available in treatment courts
- ✓ Role of judicial leadership
- ✓ Increased awareness of the role of trauma in justice system
- ✓ Integration of peers into ATCC from advisory to paid employees
